What a finished day looks like

Three headings, three paragraphs. This is one real day, written the way it should be. About 80 words.

Monday, 10 November

1 · THANK YOU FOR

Two sentences. One real thing, and why.

One thing I am grateful for today is that my mom let us play outside until the street lights came on. I am grateful because we got to finish the whole match and I scored the last goal.

2 · WHAT HAPPENED

Three sentences. First, then, after that. It happened yesterday, so: walked, not walk.

First, I woke up late and I had to run to get my bag ready. Then, at break, Thabo and I found a lizard under the water pipe and we watched it for a long time. After that, I came home and my hands were so dirty that Dad made me wash them twice.

3 · THE STORY

Three sentences. Made up is fine. Something must happen.

The night the moon went out. One night the moon just switched off like a lamp and everything went dark. My dog started howling and I was the only one who was not scared. We climbed the hill with a torch and found the little man whose job was to change the moon's bulb.

Before you close the book — four checks, out loud

1. Does it make sense when I read it back? 2. Big letter at the start, full stop at the end of every sentence? 3. Finger spaces between the words? 4. Is there one word I could swap for a better one?

My journal

Date

1 · THANK YOU FOR

Two sentences. One real thing, and why.

2 · WHAT HAPPENED

Three sentences. First, then, after that.

3 · THE STORY

Three sentences. Made up is fine.

Four checks before you stop

1. Does it make sense when I read it back? 2. Big letter, full stop? 3. Finger spaces? 4. One better word?

My Friday story

Date

Take the best story of the week and write it again, longer. Six to eight sentences. A beginning, a middle and an end.

TITLE

Two checks for the Friday story

1. Does the end know it is the end? 2. Does the title make me want to read it?